

1. How does the author develop the central idea of improved online shopping for electronics?
 - A. He provides a list of retailing problems that have been addressed.
 - B. He repeats throughout the selection that internet shopping is not safe.
 - C. He discusses future sites to be investigated for not following consumer laws.
 - D. He outlines problems that the Commission encountered while working with retailers.
-

Read the passage - 'Consumers: Most Internet Sites Now Safe to Buy Electronic Goods' - and answer the question below:

2. How does John Dalli's quote in paragraph 2 support the central idea of the selection?
 - A. It explains how thoroughly the sweeps have been conducted.
 - B. It explains John Dalli's role on the Commission and during the sweeps.
 - C. It explains why the sweeps are important for promoting online shopping.
 - D. It gives details about how consumer confidence has improved since the sweeps started.
-

Read the passage - 'Consumers: Most Internet Sites Now Safe to Buy Electronic Goods' - and answer the question below:

3. Which summarizes the selection?
 - A. Sweeps will end the problems and ensure safety for consumers who use internet shopping.
 - B. Sweeps of internet sites selling electronics have improved compliance with consumer laws.
 - C. Electronic purchases from the internet should be halted until sweeps are finished.
 - D. Electronic purchases from the internet are a risk to consumers.

4. Which detail gives specific evidence to support the central idea?
- A. "The problems identified included misleading information on consumer rights, incorrect prices, and missing contact details of the trader."
 - B. "The Commission also announced the initial findings of the 2010 Sweep targeting online sales of tickets for cultural and sporting events."
 - C. "A 'sweep' is an enforcement action led by the EU and carried out by national enforcement authorities."
 - D. "Overall, of 369 websites originally checked, 310 sites (84%) now comply with EU-wide consumer rules, compared with only 163 sites (44%) in May 2009."

Read the passage - 'Consumers: Most Internet Sites Now Safe to Buy Electronic Goods' - and answer the question below:

5. How does the section "Electronic Sweep Results" help develop the main idea of the selection?
- A. It reinforces the need to avoid internet shopping because it is unsafe.
 - B. It informs the reader about which problems are more significant.
 - C. It provides details about what improvements have been made.